REVEAL

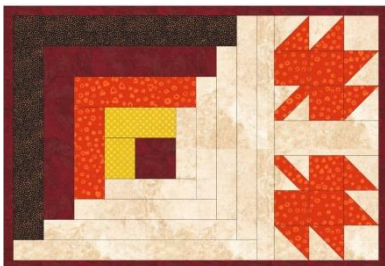

These are really easy layouts. Here are your Table Runner layout options.

The blocks are aligned two wide. Rotate the log cabins as you wish if other layouts appeal to you. My fabric allowance included a narrow border cut from 1 1/2" wide strips in my Medium 1 fabric. You can add additional or wider borders as you wish.

Now just a couple of people wanted a narrower table runner. I am adding this bit from what I wrote originally because I had to think about it. The blocks don't make a great design until they are at least two blocks wide, however, if you can be happy with just the maple blocks as your table runner, you can use them alone. Here is a rendition of what it would look like. It would measure around 13x49.

Placemats can be made from four log cabin blocks and by making just 8 more of the smaller 9 patch maple leaf sections.

Add these to the side of the log cabin to make something like this. Just cut 4 more of the 5 5/8" background strips to join two for each placemat. Rotate any direction that appeals to you. They would measure around 12 x 18. You can add borders or just bind them with one of your favorite fabrics.

Here is my finished topper

The layout is 4 x 4 with one or two narrow borders from 1 1/2" strips. You can make wider borders as well.

There are multiple layout options for this one. You can just make more blocks to make a larger quilt if you want bed size. I hope you will express your creativity on this one.
